Understanding Active Acne

Active acne involves ongoing breakouts, clogged pores, and inflammation. Severity varies from person to person — which is why a personalized treatment approach is essential.

Cystic & Nodular Acne

What Triggers Acne?

Acne is rarely caused by a single factor. Multiple triggers can contribute — identifying yours is the first step to effective treatment.

Excess Sebum

Overactive oil glands clog pores and create an environment for breakouts.

Hormonal Changes

Fluctuations during puberty, stress, or menstrual cycles can trigger acne.

Acne-Causing Bacteria

Cutibacterium acnes thrives in clogged pores, worsening inflammation.

Lifestyle & Habits

Stress, diet, and improper skincare routines can all play a role.

Medical Chemical Peels

Possible Peel Options
